

From: University Center for Teaching and Learning <teaching@pitt.edu>

Sent: 03/13/2020 3:00 PM

Subject: Update on Instructional Continuity Resources

Instructional Continuity

The University Center for Teaching and Learning has expanded its resources on instructional continuity in order to better assist faculty with the transition to remote and alternative learning methods. Visit our website for information on assessment, communicating with students, teaching online, technology tools, and news and updates.

The Teaching Center will begin offering a series of remote office hours starting Sunday, March 15. Sessions will be structured as either open topic or broad topic Q&A discussions and delivered remotely via Zoom. Teaching consultants and educational technologists will be available to answer instructors' questions on a first-come, first-served basis.

Remote Office Hours Schedule:

- Sunday, March 15, 11 a.m. – noon: Open Q & A
- Monday, March 16, 3 – 4 p.m.: General Considerations for Moving Materials Online
- Tuesday, March 17, 6:30 – 7:30 p.m.: Open Q & A
- Wednesday, March 18, 10 – 11 a.m.: Assignments
- Wednesday, March 18, 6 -- 7 p.m.: Open Q & A
- Thursday, March 19, noon – 1 p.m.: Tests and Quizzes
- Friday, March 20, 9 – 10 a.m.: Academic Integrity/Anti-Cheating

You can find the connection information and additional resources at the Teaching Center webpage.

Please note that we are also planning a virtual workshop series and will distribute this information as soon as it's confirmed.